THE CHAUTAUQUA

Interest is Growing and Crowds are Increasing

Thursday afternoon the Lyric Glee Club gave a splendid entertainment at the Chautauqua tent. These gentlemen received a hearty welcome, having been here last year, at which time their beautiful voices charmed the Chautauqua goers. After a miscellaneous program they presented the "Mikado" in costume. This number was received with enthusiasm.

At night the Glee Club gave an introductory concert. Col. Bain, who is dearly loved, wherever he makes his appearance, then gave his eloquent lecture "If I Could Live Life Over." Although Col. Bain had given a lecture at Aurora in the afternoon, he was still in good condition and the audience sat entranced before his eloquence and wit. His lecture was especially addressed to young people and those who listened will never forget his kindly words of counsel and advice given in so charming a manner.

This afternoon the Cover Sisters gave a concert after which the celebrated humorist, Strickland W. Gillilan, gave an entertainment.

Postmaster Chapell received a dispatch from Congressman Morgan at Washington yesterday informing him that he had secured recognition of our claims to free delivery of mails and that an investigation as to sidewalks, street lights, street signs and house numbers would be made in a short time. This is quick work on the part of our Congressman. He only arrived in Washington on the 8th, from his visit here. It is now up to us to get busy.

DOES KYRL'S HAIR DIRECT HIS FAMOUS BAND?

Is The Question At The Zoo.

What is the affinity between hair and music? For years poets went about with long locks and hungry looks, and now musicians go them several better as to the length of hair, but seem to be well-fed. At the Zoo this week, where Bohumir Kryl and his band are holding forth, and where this world famous band is drawing record breaking crowds, Cincinnatians get their second look at what is probably the greatest shock of hair in the musical circles today. Kryl's countenance would not indicate that he has music in his soul. He has the short and stubby features of one who wields the glove or rules the political destinies of some precinct.

But that hair! One would almost think that when the barber brushes it, if he ever does, it would emit sweet strains, "breathing o'er a bank of violets."

LIKE A TOADSTOOL.

With his shaggy and stocky form silhouetted against the lights, Kryl looks like a toadstool in a tempest.

You can put your hands to your ears and yet tell from the condition of Kryl's hair whether the band is attending a crescendo or has relaxed into pianissimo. His hair reflects the spirit of music as the sea registers the condition of the elements. At times it is placid while the reeds are droning out some sweet melody, but let the brasses thunder forth, and this interpretative hirsute appendage becomes a most animated thing. Hairs dash over each other in a riot of motion, and yet the mass moves with a rhythm inspired by the particular selection being played.

SUCCEEDS BATON.

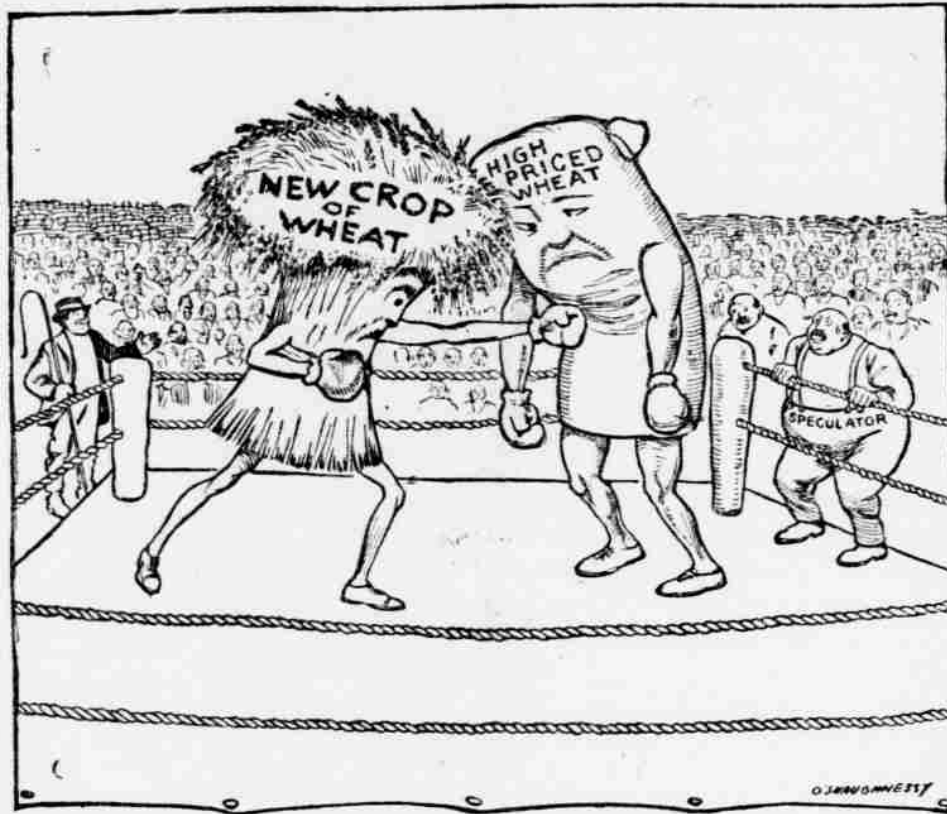

The truth of the matter is that hair has succeeded the baton with some leaders. Watch the men in Kryl's band and you will find that they keep their eyes on the musical locks. He surely does not wear it for comfort during a season when even dogs are deprived of the beautiful coats with which nature has provided them. He does not wear it for beauty, otherwise Kryl would have it marcelled and all those other things done to it that the vanity of women dictates.

No, it is a thing of usefulness and it would not surprise any one if Kryl would throw away his baton and give a concert soon, in which he would lead his band by simply shaking his shaggy mane.

Kryl is somewhat spectacular in directing his band, but there is no question that he extracts music from his men, and that the band continues to grow in enthusiastic favor among the Cincinnatians is attested by the ever increasing crowds and the tremendous ovations that are given each concert. The eight grand opera singers, presenting scenes from grand opera, with the superb accompaniments of Kryl and his band, are a great attraction in itself.

It is a new innovation, Kryl being the first to introduce a feature of this kind and the soloists are of such unusual ability, their voices are so well balanced, and the scenes presented by them always receive the enthusiastic ovation of the great crowds.

For the information of our readers we will state that Kryl and his great band, in connection with the eight grand opera singers, the same organization that has been receiving such a tremendous ovation at the Cincinnati Zoo will be at the Monett assembly on Musical Festival day, Friday July 16 at which time they will give a grand concert at the night session. This is the biggest musical attraction that has ever been booked for this place and the band should be greeted with record breaking crowds, and this is just one of the many other big attractions that will be presented at the Chautauqua this year. If you will drop a card to R. M. Callaway, Monett, Mo., a copy of the Chautauqua Herald which contains the official program for each day and full information of all the other big attractions, will be mailed to you direct.—Cincinnati Post.

Rev. W. O. Talbert and little daughter spent Monday afternoon in Monett.

Mrs. N. N. Hoover left Sunday night for Humboldt, Tenn., where she will join her husband and spend some time in the Southland attending chautauquas and places of interest.

During the storm Sunday afternoon lightning struck a tree in the yard of C. C. Tate's home northeast of our city. One of his boys was knocked down but no serious damage was done.

While the morning and afternoon sessions of the Chautauqua were largely attended they were nothing compared to the crowds which flowed into the tent last night. Notwithstanding the number of season tickets which had been sold, a large number of single admissions were sold at the gate, and the tent with its 3,500 capacity was crowded from wall to wall. The evening meeting was opened promptly by several rare musical selections by the Lyric Glee club. The attraction was then presented by Lulu Gates, who gave many dialectical, humorous, satirical and pathological sketches. The audience were first moved to laughter and next almost to tears by the masterful manner in which Miss Gates portrayed the characters she was representing.—Springfield Republican

Lulu Tyler Gates will appear at the Monett Chautauqua Saturday, July 10, at 1:30 p. m.

Mendon

Here we are once more with the hot sultry weather upon our backs. Mrs. Cora Wright's sister, Mrs. Hadley and little son, of Cassville, is spending this week visiting with her.

Mrs. Shaw, Frank Hunnel and wife, John Grissom and wife spent Saturday on Spring river, fishing. They report a good mess of chiggers. Well the early blackberry harvest is just about over.

Wheat stacking seems to be the general topic at present.

Young Costley and two sons came near being drowned last Sunday evening while the water was up. They were at Sam Anderson's and started home, drove into the ford by Sam's and it had washed out. By good courage they got out but the horse and buggy washed on down against the fence near Mat Anderson's and was rescued. People should be a little careful about plunging into high water.

Mr. and Mrs. Grissom spent Sunday in Stotts City with her mother, Mrs. Pross.

Rezin Zinn and son Ralph spent Sunday evening at Judge Mathews'.

Mr. Smith Todd and four sons spent Sunday at Clarkson.

Mrs. Shaw expects to leave in a few days for Tulsa for a visit, while Mr. Shaw will remain at home and attend to affairs.
